This work, which has been a long time in preparation, will be the most correct and important work that has hitherto appeared on the seat of war. Captain Spencer, having visited all the places described, and passed many years in these countries, has been enabled to collect much information relative to scenes which are, at the present moment, fraught with so intense an interest. The embellishments are from actual sketches taken on the spot, and will, it is hoped, place the sites of these all-important events vividly and truthfully before the eyes of the reader, while no pains has been spared to render their execution such as their present interest deserves.
